-If your spoons are stained from eggs, rub them with a little common salt.

-Use of sulphur in bleaching evaporated fruit is referred to by Green's Fruit Grower as "at all times unsafe." Better have darker color with flavor and healthfulness.

-To take rust out of steel, rub the steel with sweet oil; in a day or two rub with finely-powdered unslaked lime until the rust all disappears, then oil again, roll in woolen and put in a dry place, especially if it be table cutlery.

-Sponge Cake. -Two eggs and one cup of sugar well beaten together, one half cup of sweet milk; mix one teaspoon baking powder or one-half teaspoon of soda and one teaspoon cream tartar with one cup of sifted flour.

-Alum water will restore most all faded colors; brush the faded articles thoroughly to free it from dust, cover it with lather of castile soap, rinse with clear water and then with alum water, and the color will usually appear much brighter than before.

-Beef essence should be made in the oven. Cut one pound of good lean beef into small square pieces. Put them in a brown jar; sprinkle them with a little salt and pour on a teacupful of water. Tie brown paper firmly over the top of the jar, and leave it for five or six hours in the oven until all the goodness has been extracted.

-Light and delicate dumplings are made by this recipe: Half a pound of beef suet, chopped extremely fine, ten ounces fine bread crumbs, one large tablespoonful of flour, the grated rinds of two small lemons, four ounces of powdered sugar and four eggs beaten very light. Mix thoroughly and add the juice of two lemons. Divide this mixture into four parts, tie in well-floured cioths and boil one hour in slightly-salted wa-

-Boiled Indian pudding is improved for some people if suit is added to give it richness. Chop a quarter of a round of beef suct very fine, add an equal quantity of sugar, one teaspoonful of ginger, half a teaspoonful of salt, enough sweet milk to moisten the meal, and a teaspoonful of baking powder, or about a cup of sour milk and a teaspoonful of soda. This should boil in a bag for at least three hours, and be served hot with sauce.

-Charcoal is often recommended for pigs and fowls, but it is not generally understood that it is good feed for any kind of stock fed with corn or other heating material. There is a slight al kaline effect from charcoal which helps to correct acidity of the stomach. It is excellent for mixing with the food of animals that are being fatted, experience showing that the increase of fat is greatest when a proportion of charcoal is [ allowed.

-Any rule in regard to quantity of food for poultry is difficult to establish and unsafe to rely upon, because the appetite of a flock is not always the same. They may eat a given quantity for break fast one morning and leave half of it the next. Nature is the only infallible tide. A fowl is naturally a most incesgant feeder. At liberty they are continually in search of something to eat In confinement we should imitate nature as far as we can in caring for them.

-If you have not a tight chest or box in which to store away woolen goods out of the way of moths, a well-cleaned flour barrel will answer, but should be carefully lined with newspapers pasted over every crevice, that none of the pests may find their way inside. The garments should be well aired, shaken and brushed and any soiled spot thoroughly cleaned and dried. Then they should be folded smoothly, wrapped separately in fresh n wapapers, tied around with a string, not pinned, and be marked with a lead, pencilion a blank space in the paper, so the moment you lay hands on a package you know what it contains, in case you have need for any of them during the summer. The barrel should then be tied or pasted over with newspapers and over them thick wrapping paper. If the barrel is to be exposed it may be made into a presentable article of furniture by covering over the top with a square board, an inch larger than the diameter of the barrel. Tack around three sides of this a curtain of any pretty material. Cover the top with the same, and finish with brass headed nails or a full ruffle,-Barnesville Gazette

The Coming Cattle Oneen.

Among the droves who alighted from a cattle caboose at the stock yard in Chicago was a tall, majestic-looking woman of about thirty years. Though not a beauty, she would have commanded attention in a metropolitan throughfare.

"Men are all frauds," she said, with a laugh. "I wouldn't marry the best one of them that ever lived. I prefer to be their superior by remaining in such circumstances that I can always buy their labor and esteem." Miss Mary Meagher was the name to which the lady answered. In Washington Territory she is known as the coming cattle queen, the companion celebrity to Miss Liff, of Denver. In the train she had ten carloads of cattle which had endured the experiment of a 2.500 mile ride. She values the stock at $10,000, and says if the trip is financially successful she will return very soon from Walla Walla with 400 additional head. She employs a number of cowboys and is the owner of a large herd of cattle, to the raising of which she gives her per-

DOMESTIC RECIPES.

Julia Corson Tells us How to Cook Flah.

BROILED SALT MACKEREL WITH BUTTER SAUCE. - Soak a salt mackerel over night, laying it in plenty of cold water, with the skin uppermost, so that the salt may fall to the bottom of the water after it is disengaged from the fish. In the morning trim off the tail, fins and point of the head; dry the mackerel, put it between the bars of a double-wire gridiron, well buttered to prevent sticking, and brown the fish over a hot fire; while it is being browned boil some potatoes, as directed in the following recipe, and make a butter sauce: when the potatoes and sauce are ready, serve them separately in hot dishes, and serve the fish with some slices of lemon, or a few sprigs of parsley or watercresses, on the dish, as a garnish.

BUTTER SAUCE FOR BROILED MACK-EREL.-Put in a saucepan over the fire a table-spoonful each of butter and flour, and then stir them until they bubble; then gradually stir in a pint of boiling water, and when the sauce is smooth season it with a level tea-spoonful of salt, quarter of a salt-spoonful of white pepper, and a table-spoonful of chopped parsley or capers, if either is available; after the sauce has boiled for two minutes, add to it three table-spoonfuls of butter, cut in small pieces, and stir the sauce until the butter is melted; do not allow the sauce to boil after the butter is added; when the butter is melted put in the juice of half a lemon, and serve the sauce at once with the BOILED POTATOES TO SERVE WITH FISH. - Choose small, smooth potatoes of even size, wash them and then peel them, taking care to remove only a very thin paring and to keep them smooth, and laving each one in cold water as it is peeled; when the fish is first put to cook place the potatoes over the fire in plenty of salted boiling water, and boil them for ten minutes, or until they can be easily pierced with a fork; do not allow the potatoes to boil until they begin to break, but drain them as soon as they are tender; after draining the potatues cover them with a clean towel, folded several times and place the saucepan containing them where they will keep hot without burning until the fish is done; the folded towel will retain the heat and at the same time permit the steam to escape, so that the potatoes will be mealy and unbroken when they are served. Potatoes may be boiled in their jackets the same way, a thin ring of paring being removed after they are washed; as is the case with the peeled potatoes, care must be taken to drain the potatoes as soon as they are tender enough to be pierced with a folk, and they must then be covered with a folded towel and allowed to steam.

The Last Cholera.

The last cholera, that of 1883 and 1884, which we dread will be revived in Europe this spring and summer, was carried from India to Tonquin and China in 1881 and 1882, and was sent back to France in 1883 and 1884. It was also carried from Bombay to Damietta, in Egypt, in 1883, and caused nearly forty thousand deaths, when it died out completely. From Egypt it was carried late in 1883 to Marseilles in France, where it died out in the winter. In 1884 it was brought from Tonquin and perhaps from Egypt, to Toulon, in France, and was spread to Italy by fleeing Italian laborers. It was sent from France to Spain, and also up to Paris. where it caused about a thousand deaths in October and November, 1884. Whether it will commence anew in Europe this year no one knows: but, with the modern knowledge of the disease and sanitation, it will be disgraceful to all concerned if it does. We do not know whether it will reach this country; but if it does, all large cities with good boards of health and large and pure water supply will escape lightly. Dirty towns and villages, where much animal and human filth is stored, and where the wells are contaminated, will suffer heavily. The poison of cholera is all contained in the discharges, and if the nurses and attendants of the sick will be careful to wash their hands after hand. clothing and articles are washed and and disinfected at once. It is the persons in the incipient stages of the disease, those suffering with the premonitary diarrhea, who sow the germs of the disease everywhere and by handling even bread or fruit or vegetables contaminated them in such way that they become dangerous and infectious to others. Cholera progresses slowly
